An open plan office is a great tool to easily maximise the available floor space and boost collaboration. But it also poses a few problems...

How, for instance, can you segregate the office to provide a mix of private and communal spaces without the presence of fixed – or even moving – partition walls?

Constructif answers that question. The modular, space dividing system allows users and designers alike to create different zones for living, working, collaborating and relaxing. In the multi-functional workplace of today, it's the system every office needs to thrive.

With that in mind, Oktra approached us to provide a bespoke unit for start-up supporter, IncuBus Ventures.

Working with the London-based design firm, we developed a custom-built, freestanding Constructif arrangement that would fit at home in IncuBus' industrial-style space.

After showcasing different variations to Oktra's furniture team and allowing them to customise it, a final design was agreed upon, and off it went into production.

Manufactured on-site at Creatif HQ in Leeds, the system was delivered to site in London and installed in a matter of weeks.

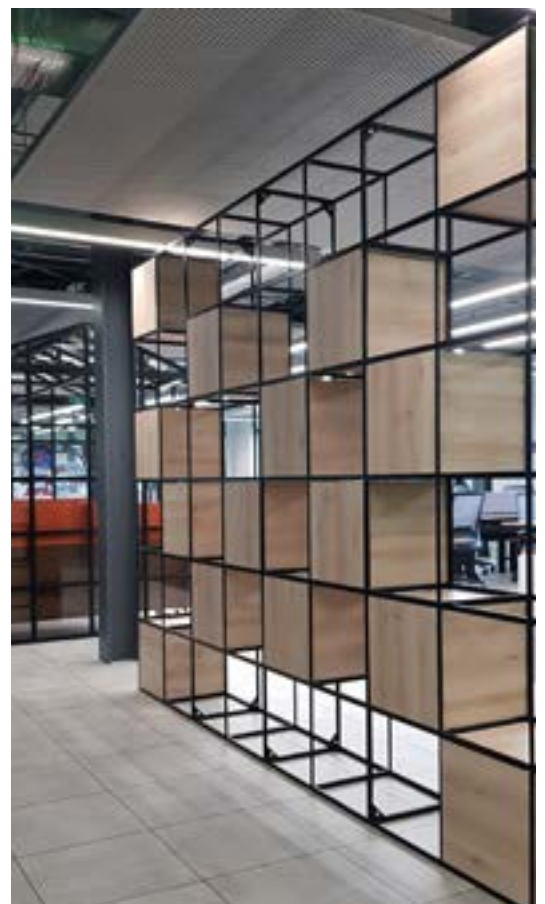

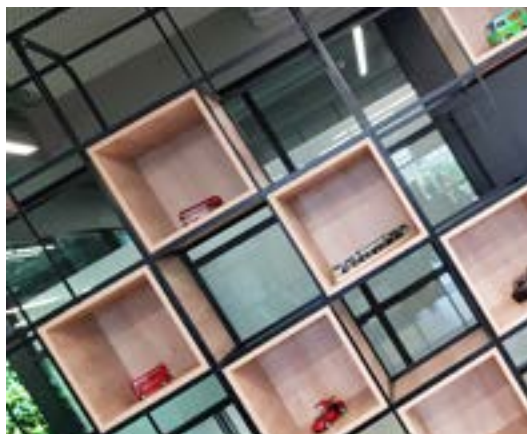

The end result is a clean and modern space divider, featuring handmade beech alcoves interspersed within a timeless black frame.
